

Abstract

The invention relates to an arrangement for preparing a liquid treatment solution for treating photosensitive material, said arrangement including a storage container for storing fresh treating solution to be fed to a development compartment of a development apparatus, a supply portion for supplying a dry component or components and/or one or several mixtures of components for preparing the treatment solution and a reception container for receiving a solvent, wherein according to the invention a mixing tank is interposed between said supply portion, said reception container and said storage container.

1042000-04-01